PREFACE.

THE following pages contain a list of the industrial, co-operative, friendly and benefit, political, social, scientific, and monetary institutions established in New South Wales. The list has been compiled to illustrate the interest and activity of the people of this community in such matters. It will be observed from a perusal of the lists that the trades and labour organisations, the friendly and co-operative associations, and the building societies are exceptionally strong, while with regard to scientific bodies the people of New South Wales are also well provided for. The capitalistic associations, though few in number, are rich in resources and powerful in influence. As is to be expected in a country where free speech, manhood suffrage, and vote by ballot prevail, the political forces are varied and numerous. New South Wales presents an interesting study for all who take an interest in sociology and politics, for here many problems which still vex older communities have been solved, and doctrines once considered dangerous to society have been applied with beneficial results to mankind. In no part of the world is the eight-hour system more successfully worked. State socialism enters largely into our machinery of government. The railways, tramways, postal and telegraphic communication, and a labour bureau are all worked and controlled by the State. Courts of Conciliation and Arbitration are now established by law. Our system of vote by ballot has been copied in Great Britain and the United States. Manhood suffrage, after thirty-six years trial, is still the law of the land, the tendency being to extend it by the adoption of the "one man one vote" principle. The Parliament of

New South Wales contains a new feature in government in the shape of a Standing Committee on Public Works, to which all parliamentary votes of over £20,000 for public works, such as railways, buildings, bridges, harbour works, etc., have to be referred for inquiry and report before they are submitted for the approval of the Legislature. This feature of our Governments is being adopted by the other Australian provinces. There are other institutions in the community which are doing good work for the masses, the nature and operation of which it might be of interest to the philosophical to study; and the lists of our benevolent institutions, hospitals, and other charities will show that as regards the poor and the sick, most ample provision is made for their comfort and treatment. There is no Poor Law in this community. The list is circulated in the hope that it will attract the attention of the thoughtful, and thus lead to the establishment of similar bodies elsewhere.

CENTRAL GOVERNING ORGANISATIONS FOR CAPITAL AND LABOUR.

THE following bodies are the executives of the various unions or associations mentioned. During a strike or other disturbance between capital and labour, some of these organisations exercise great power and far-reaching influence. The Eight Hours Demonstration Committee conducts the procession and festive gathering annually held to celebrate the triumph of the eight-hour system, which so far has been won by voluntary effort. The Trades and Labour Councils are the Parliaments of the working classes, and hold their meetings weekly.

SHEARERS' UNION.

THESE organisations form portions of a powerful amalgamation spread throughout Australasia. Their members consist largely of young farmers or free selectors, who travel the country shearing sheep from August till December, and then usually return to the district in which they reside. The organisation is managed by an executive council, which, with delegates from branches, meets annually in conference. The head quarters of the Amalgamated Shearers' Union of Australasia is at Creswick, Victoria.

POLITICAL ORGANISATIONS.

THE organisations here mentioned are for political purposes only, and they are very active at the elections for the Lower House of the Legislature. The Free Selectors' Associations are formed more particularly to deal with the land laws, but they also at times work for general political objects. The free selectors are men who purchase the public lands, in areas ranging from 40 acres to 2,550 acres, and for which they pay the State £1 per acre, in yearly instalments of 1s. per acre. The National Works Economic Association is formed to achieve the abolition of certain institutions, the members of which are paid by the State to supervise or report upon public works, such as the Water and Sewerage Board and Public Works Committee.
